

TWO HULMEVILLE MISSES ENJOY A JAUNT TO COLOMBIA

Saddle Trip by Mule Up Mount Ruis is Participated In

STOP AT CANAL ZONE

Misses Reetz and Webster Are Guests of Former Bucks Countians

Barranquilla, Cartagena, Pereira, Medellin—names which conjure the imagination as the map of Colombia, South America, is scanned—brought many days of happy vacation to two young women from Hulmeville, the Misses Adeline E. Reetz and Betty Webster. The mid-winter trip of four weeks' duration likewise afforded visits to Kingston, Jamaica; and to the Panama Canal Zone.

With memories of strychnine and clonidine trees, the travelers' palm, galaxies of orchids of every hue and size, of bright red poinsettias, and pure white gardenias, and scores of other native flowers and trees of all types fresh in mind, the two returned to their homes on Thursday, following a visit to former Bucks Countians, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Robinson, in Pereira.

Sailing from New York on the S. S. "Veragua" on the 13th of December, the first stop was made at the island of Jamaica. As the ship slid into the harbor native Negro boys in shell-like boats greeted them with wildly waving arms and the cries of "Throw over some money. We want po'k chops to-night," then began the diving in the churned-up waters, but never once did the lads break the surface without the sought coins. Milk and vegetables were the chief cargo unloaded, while the exchange as it were was in coffee and bananas, plus other tropical goods. Securing the services of a chauffeur and his automobile, the two with other members of the boat party, started their sight-seeing trek of the city. Through the narrow streets to Castleton Gardens the way led, where the visitors from the United States viewed with awe trees most unusual. Near to the strychnine and clonidine trees, grew the "traveler's tree," so called because a knife plugged at the roots will bring gushes of water. The traveler's palm, true to its tradition, was found growing with palms pointing East and West, this being the result no matter how the tree is planted. Irridescent ferns with their changing colors; wares made from sandalwood berries, vases fashioned of bamboo which had been carved and painted, made the visit an interesting one. Passing by the white houses which formed a background for countless poinsettias, the sight-seers enjoyed dinner at the Myrtlebank Hotel, whose swimming pool was lined with coconut palms. The cool breeze experienced in the nearby hill country proved welcome relief from the intense heat of the city.

Crossing the Caribbean Sea the following day, the ship docked at Barranquilla on the morning of December 19th. Colombia, they found, like most tropical country, to be the "Land of Manana," or "Land of Tomorrow," where life moves slowly indeed. The day of disembarking was passed in a tour of this city, the Indian section proving particularly interesting. The strange sight of the pack burros entering from the country, enroute to market, will long be remembered. The rider, in each instance, sat cross-legged between the packs of heavy burdens, the goods in the main being bananas and greens. "Passing down the streets we would find entire families grouped about tables placed on the side-walks, eating their meals. Their homes consist usually of one or possibly two rooms, and in them families numbering eight or nine individuals, and the pies and chickens gathered," said Miss Reetz in telling of her trip.

The older portion of Barranquilla is in the center of the city, with beautiful new homes erected on the outskirts. Balconies of the DePrado Hotel, where the party stopped, were built about the swimming pool. The unusual designs and colorings of the grille-work in the homes impressed the visitors.

Leaving by airplane on Wednesday morning the next destination was Medellin, then Cartago, their host meeting them there for the trip by automobile to Pereira. The airline used being operated by a German company, and due to the fact Germany is at war, German soldiers were stationed at each airport. The stop at Medellin afforded opportunity for luncheon and "Tinto," the cup of black coffee which is as much of a custom in that part of the world as the traditional cup of tea in England. The cup of "Tinto" and a few cookies, it was found, cost the sum of $1.

"The ride by plane down the valley, between high mountain ranges, was a gorgeous sight," said Miss Reetz, as she described the beauty of the jungle country, land inhabited by Indians who still use the bow and arrow. "We were informed that during the past year 25 white men were killed in that area by arrows. As we flew on, here

The Pressure For Money

Washington, Jan. 16.

THERE are pessimistic observers in Washington who think that before the session is over the whole flimsy pretense of economy will have disappeared and a striking demonstration be given of the fact, often enough charged, that the Federal finances have gotten out of control. Apprehensions along these lines exist both within and without the Administration.

—O—

THEY are particularly acute among the more conservatively inclined Treasury officials, of whom there still remain a few, and the reasons upon which their fears are based are clear enough. First, there is the power and rapacity of the farm lobby; second, there is the admitted tendency in both parties to cater to agricultural interests, especially in an election year; third, there is the conviction that, while the President unquestionably will protest the wreckage of his budget, he will not make the kind of fight necessary to halt excessive appropriations or compulsory carrying taxes, although he could win that kind of fight if he should make it.

—O—

ON the contrary, the journalistic reflectors of the White House appear unanimous in the belief that Mr. Roosevelt is already reconciled—in fact, was before he submitted his budget—to Congressional disregard of his estimates and intends to load on Congress full blame for the increased, rather than the diminished, deficit which is foreseen, and full re-

GREENBERG GIVEN NEW TRIAL BECAUSE OF ERROR OF COURT

Merely Made a Little Slip of Words in Charge to Jury

IT WAS A FATAL ERROR

Was Convicted of Arson at The Well-Known Black Cat Inn

DOYLESTOWN, Jan. 16—The much-discussed Adam Greenberg case must be tried again. The owner of the Black Cat Inn on the Lackawanna Trail between Plumsteadville and Pipersville, who was convicted of arson on September 25, last year in the Bucks county criminal court, has another chance ahead.

Greenberg, 56, a resident of Buckingham Township, was convicted by a jury that deliberated three hours and returned a verdict of guilty last September. The Black Cat Inn was destroyed by fire on October 6, 1938, a time when Greenberg, it was testified at the trial, was worth $40,000.

After the verdict was rendered last September a motion for a new trial was filed by Greenberg's attorney, John L. DuBois and Wilbur Vandine, of Doylestown.

Yesterday in the Court of Quarter Sessions, Judge Calvin S. Boyer handed down an opinion, granting a new trial. The verdict was set aside on the ground that the Court had "unconsciously and inadvertently" referred to "weight of evidence" in speaking of the proof required in one branch of the case, although it correctly charged the jury at numerous other times in the charge as to proof "beyond a reasonable doubt."

Neither the Court nor the attorneys noticed the mistake until after the testimony was transcribed. It was pointed out in the opinion filed. The Court, after citing numerous Supreme Court decisions to the effect that a misstatement of the law in one part of the charge is not cured by a correct statement thereof in another part, said in conclusion:

"We conclude that the Court's inadvertent statement, now excepted to, was fatal error requiring the setting aside of the verdict and the granting of a new trial. It is with regret that we feel constrained to do this."

"The verdict was fully justified by the evidence. We are satisfied that the jury neither noticed nor understood the slight error which escaped the notice of the Court and the four learned members of the Bar, who were interested in the case."

"As a matter of fact, it is absurd to suppose that a little slip by the insertion of one or two incorrect words would cause any misapprehension of the law by the jury."

"However, under the decisions which we have cited in this case we are definitely of the opinion that the mistake would be held to be reversible error by the Appellate Courts. The other reasons and exceptions filed are without merit and are dismissed."

The Greenberg case was prosecuted by District Attorney Edward G. Biesler and his assistant, Willard S. Curtin, Morrisville.

The jury found Greenberg guilty of starting a series of seven separate and distinct fires at his Black Cat Inn. Since the guilty verdict was rendered Greenberg has been out under $5000 bail.

The case took four days to try during which time the Commonwealth offered numerous exhibits in evidence, including scores of cans, bottles, cardboard boxes and other containers that were gasoline-soaked and partly burned the morning of the fire.

The Black Cat Inn, still in ruins, remains unchanged since the night of the fire.

ANNUAL MESSAGE OF BURGESS

January 2, 1940.

To the President and Members of Town Council of the Borough of Bristol, Bristol, Pennsylvania.

Gentlemen: My twenty-second consecutive message to the officers and members of your honorable body will be to attempt a brief summary of the achievements of its various committees, with which I have in many instances served.

We again close our year with all bills paid, including matured bonds and the interest thereon, this without any increase in either assessment or tax rate. This, in the face of still too large a list of delinquent taxes, is a most credible report and brings credit to the officers and committees in charge of the various departments of our borough.

This has been accomplished by strict economy on the part of your various committees, and I again urge that the same careful, businesslike thought and consideration be given in making appropriations for the coming year.

Your street and highway committee reports the following: A 24-inch storm sewer, with sufficient inlets, was installed on Wood street between Lincoln avenue and Hollow Creek, to take care of the water which formerly was surface drained and flooded that area during heavy rain storms.

The installation of this 24-inch storm sewer has entirely remedied this condition.

The one-way traffic ordinance was put into force shortly after January 1st of last year and has proven most efficient and solved the badly congested condition on Mill street, besides making the street safe for pedestrians.

The parking lot back of Mill Street has been lighted, improved and enlarged and provides ample parking space for patrons of our stores and motion picture theatres.

Various streets of our borough have been repaired, and in a number of instances resurfaced. Much credit is due your street committee who worked on a very small appropriation for 1939.

Following is a list of water mains laid during 1939:

BRISTOL
470 feet 10-inch Pipe on Wilson Ave. to West Circle—Madison.
620 feet 6-inch Pipe on Adams to Madison—Porter.
300 feet 6-inch Pipe on Wood to Radcliffe—New Brook.
500 feet 6-inch Pipe on Porter to West Circle—Adams.
EDGELY
400 feet 6-inch Pipe Penn. towards Canal—Patterson.
DELAWARE RIVER REALTY
200 feet 4-inch Pipe Cedar towards end—Poplar.
447 feet 6-inch Pipe Manor Circle—Landreth Manor.
CROYDON

385 feet 4-inch Pipe Cloverhook to Overlook Ave.—Sycamore.
400 feet 4-inch Pipe Cedar to Wynnewood—Sycamore.
100 feet 4-inch Pipe Woodland towards Euclid—Sycamore.
1350 feet 6-inch Pipe Euclid to a point in Magnolia 180 feet North of Wynnewood Ave.—Magnolia.
2700 feet 8-inch Pipe Prospect to Grundy's Corner—Newportville Road.

Total water mains laid 7872 lin. feet. There were installed in 1939, a total of 222 new services, 18 being in the borough and 204 in the Township, making a total of 3131 in the Borough and a total of 907 in the township.

Total pumpage: 659,178,000 gals., (an increase of 42 million gallons over 1938.)

It is interesting to note, although 42 million gallons more water was pumped, 33,400 K.W. less power was used. This saving in power was effected by installation of more efficient pumping equipment at the water plant.

New pumping equipment installed:
1—3 million gal. high service centrifugal pump.
1—1.5 million gal. high service centrifugal pump.
1—3 million gal. low service centrifugal pump.

I again remind our citizens that we have enjoyed practically uninterrupted service in our water and sewer departments, and credit is largely due to our borough engineer and his competent staff and to the committees in charge of the operation and care of these two vital departments of our civic life.

Your fire department reports the following: Total calls numbered 122, of which 28 were out of town calls and 30 were grass fires; also 8 false alarms, which totaled 56 local alarms.

Aside from the disastrous fire at the French Wolf plant, which loss included building and contents and which entailed a loss of $42,350.00, the losses in the Borough were very moderate and reflect credit to your Fire Department. Losses were as follows:

Property in the Borough	$4,330.00
Contents in the Borough	1,802.00
Automobiles in the Borough	800.00
Gasoline Meters	500.00
Total	$7,432.00

BOROUGH COUNCIL PROPOSES BUDGET FOR THE YEAR 1940

Proposed Tax Rate Will Be 13 Mills, Same As Last Year

SEAT NEW COUNCILMAN

Council Names Daniel Ferry as Sergeant of Police

Bristol Borough Council, last night, assembled in a recessed session of the meeting held January 8th, continued the business of that meeting, which included proposing a budget for 1940, first reading of an ordinance fixing the tax rate, induction into office of a new councilman, naming of a sergeant of police, receiving the annual message of the burgess and the annual reports of various committees.

The salary of sergeant of police was increased $10 per month.

Councilmen absent were Wagner, Mulligan, Clark and Roche.

Bristol Equestrians Enter Events at State Farm Show

Two Bristol equestrians are scheduled to exhibit at the spectacular and thrilling horse show to be conducted in conjunction with the State Farm Show at Harrisburg, Friday and Saturday of this week.

Nearly 150 horses are entered from all parts of Pennsylvania, New Jersey, New York, Maryland and Virginia. The localities are Dr. E. J. Laing, who will have two entries, and Carl Schilling, one entry.

Topped by a national champion—Band Leader Paul Whiteman's Tennessee walking horse, "Fit-For-A-King"—the array of horses to be shown is probably the most valuable and most highly trained ever exhibited in Central Pennsylvania. In addition to scores of hunters and jumpers, to be ridden by some of the East's leading horsemen and horsewomen, the 50 events of the show will include record-breaking totals of three-gaited and five-gaited saddle horses and special competitions and exhibitions calculated to appeal to the general public.

The show opens Friday night at seven o'clock with a varied selection of events for the four major classes of horses—hunters, jumpers, three-gaited and five-gaited saddle horses. Among the classes to be featured are the first Central Pennsylvania competition for the Delaware Valley Challenge Trophy for jumpers; a $150 stake for five-gaited horses; the first Harrisburg class for Tennessee Walking Horses and an exhibition by State Police riders.

Various classes for children, parents, saddle ponies and lead-line ponies are scheduled for Saturday morning, starting at 9 o'clock, while the afternoon show, beginning at 1:30 o'clock, will include an exciting group of jumping classes, as well as three-gaited saddle horses and women's horsemanship events.

The 1940 show will be climaxed by the Saturday evening performance at seven o'clock, culminating in the usual championship classes for hunters, jumpers, three-gaited and five-gaited saddle horses. These events will be supplemented this year by three $150 stake classes—for jumpers, hunters and three-gaited horses. Also scheduled for this final performance are the always-interesting touch-and-out jumping class, young women's horsemanship class and the competition of hunt teams.

In one of the most unique games of basketball ever played on the Italian Mutual Aid floor, the Rohm and Haas five scored a close triumph over Vito Delia's Celtics. Final score was 23-14 and the victory enabled the Rohm and Haas team to jump into second place in the league.

The chemical workers were very fortunate indeed to capture the verdict. In fact, they were handed the game on a silver platter by the number of fouls committed by the losers. Twelve times a Rohm & Haas player stepped to the gift line and nine times he converted. This represented more than the winners' margin of triumph.

However, the odd part of the game was that the first period ended with the baseball score of 2-0 with the Celtics in front. This field goal was made by Frankie Welsh in the first minute of play. From then on until the middle of the second period, the score remained thus with neither team able to score.

Finally, Jimmy Lake went on a spree and the Celtics had a 7-0 lead before Dougherty sank in a field goal for the chemical workers. McGinley and Lake scored again for the Celtics and before the period was over, Johnny Cole made the first field goal of the night for Rohm and Haas, making the score at half-time: Celtics, 12; Rohm and Haas, 3.

The tide of the game changed in the third quarter. Joe Roe scored the only field goal in this session. The Celtics were held scoreless both from the field and foul line, in fact, they only received four tries for a field goal during the entire session.

In the last period, the Maple Beach outfit went to town and with Joe Roe scoring a trio of goals and two fouls, evened the score and passed the cellar-dwellers. Rohm & Haas counted 15 points in the last period while McGee made the only field goal of the second half for the losers late in the fourth quarter.

PROFY FIVE DROPS GAME TO MANHATTAN TEAM

Falling to hold its lead in the last period, the Profy five dropped into a deadlock for fourth place last night when it bowed to the Manhattan Soap Company quintet, 27-24, in a close game which was decided in the last minute of play by field goals from the hands of Joe Gallagher and Punkie Zeffries.

Only in the final quarter of the game did these two clubs exhibit the brand of basketball which helped them to remain in the race for the crown of the basketball loop. Manhattan was a dismal failure in the first period, only tallying one field goal but Profy was also as bad in the second session and also made but one field goal.

Manhattan got an edge on the score in the third cant when it made nine points to Profy's five and again in the last period, the radiomen went ahead only to lose out in the final minutes of the game.

Franklin, 26; Fifth Ward, 21

The pennant hopes of the Fifth Ward Sporting Club took another upset last night as it was beaten by the Franklin A. C., 26-21, in an extra period match on the Italian Mutual Aid floor. It was the second straight setback for the Warders and the fifth consecutive win for the undefeated Franklin team.

Until the final few seconds of the regulation period game, the Fifth Ward club was ahead, 21-17. But Anthony Palumbo got away on a side shot and shaved the lead by a beautiful field goal. The shouting had hardly died down when Joe Cialella got the ball out of a scrimmage and sent it spinning through the loop just as the gun went off. The goal deadlocked the score and sent the game into an extra period. The Warders were lost in the three-minute overtime session for Cialella again went on a rampage and twice scored field goals while Rocco Sagolla made a foul for the final score of the night.

and there could be seen a few thatched-roof huts huddled together. The country was very sparsely settled. Cartago, the point where the plane ended, is noted for its low death rate. "It seems to be regarded as a healthy place in which to live, and many claim this is due to certain properties in the water."

Reaching Pereira, where their main visit was scheduled, the two found the homes and the customs of the people most intriguing. The small city is composed of houses of Spanish type, with no lawns in front, but the patios about which the structures are built, providing shade in some portion at all hours of the day. The pretty grille-work appears on the outside of the window or door spaces, and shutters on the inside. "But when the day begins the populace seem to hang out the window all day, and watches the world go by. And the world moves very slowly down there," continued the one who has just returned. "The first to arrive in the city in the morning, burdened with wares, is the milkman. In this case it is a small boy, riding a donkey in cross-legged fashion, with a milk can on either side. Next comes the baker, then the boys or men with meat. The animal is always killed in the morning, taken into town, and eaten by the purchaser on the same day, as few homes boast of any type of refrigeration. The 'butcher' has a head-piece with strap across his forehead, and from the rear of this meat or fowls are suspended down his back. No wrapping paper is used, due to its scarcity, but banana leaves take the place of paper for wrapping butter, meats, etc. All milk is boiled, and water is boiled for those who are newcomers to the country."

The main types of meat are beef and pork, and because of its freshness and toughness about one-half day is required to cook pork. "Preparation of food requires about three times as long as it does here," continued Miss Reetz. "A product called 'Panla' is used to a great extent in Colombia. This is used by human beings, and also fed to horses and cows. It tastes like hardened brown sugar, and is prepared in a cake form. Soaked in water, it gives strength and warmth to the body. It is usually placed in a pitcher of water warmed over a fire, where it gradually melts. Horses and cattle on the range, or those to whom owners give little or no care, are scrawny in appearance and many of this type are seen." Visits to homes of friends of the Robinsons proved interesting, inasmuch as they, like the Bucks Countians are foreign to the country, and are located there on business. One jaunt took them to the home of a Russian family, another to the residence of Germans, and a third to a Scotch home, each providing a different type of entertainment.

Papayas, which form the basis for tasty fruit-cups, oranges, tangerines, rose-bushes with exceptionally large blooms, all are to be found in the patios. The Robinson home, like most of its neighbors, had a stone bowl in the kitchen, with stone slab alongside on which the clothes were rubbed by the native girl who aided in the work of the home. The bowl into which running water poured, together with the slab and base were in one solid piece. Clothing is washed once then placed on the ground for bleaching; washed again and placed on the ground or a fence. Bamboo is used in many instances for building houses, and also for water pipes.

Among the interesting discoveries were that caskets used in that section are of metal, and shaped like "bullets," and that fleas make life unbearable for the new-comer when he or she tries to enjoy a motion picture.

One custom noted in particular was that girls and women of the lower class wear sandals, with toes sticking out beyond the main sole. The better class of women would not be seen carrying packages, and those of this group remain indoors during the heat of the day, the better to protect their complexions.

Visits to the ranch of Dr. John Galloway, 30 miles from Pereira, and a saddle trip by mule up the heights of Mount Ruiz, were interesting highlights of the journey.

"Butter-fly orchids which resembled three huge yellow butterflies; those of the wasp variety, which looked like clusters of wasps; the slipper orchid, and countless others were brought in from his ranch by Dr. Galloway, who also had a home in Pereira," recounted Miss Reetz today. "We were sorry not to be able to see the 'spray' orchid, which is said to have from 20 to 30 orchids on one 'spray.' At Dr. Galloway's ranch there were to be seen all types of citrus fruits, asters, roses, gardenias, and in the nearby forests we were told the orchids grew by the thousands." The home of the physician is one of the two in the city which boast of bath-tubs, while the floors and doors are of black walnut. Most of the other homes have cold showers. His home likewise, was one of the two in the city which had panes of glass. At the ranch were many, mocking birds and many beautifully colored members of the feathered tropical tribe.

The long-heralded trip by mules up the slopes of Mt. Ruiz, brought unusual experiences, and the snow-covered peak, 16,000 feet high, urged the party onward. A halt at one ranch brought a treat of fresh milk, members of the party drinking from the tumbler-size containers which the milkers used in lieu of a milk-pail. As they proceeded up the mountain, packs of mules, laden with boards, potatoes grown at an altitude of 14,000 feet, and other goods, passed them, one pack train having about 50 mules burdened with potatoes enroute to markets in Paredo. The native men, driving the trains, furnished an interesting study with their dark skins, and striped blankets. The blankets, with slits in the center through which the head was thrust, proved warm protection on the heights, then when not required for warmth were folded and placed across the shoulder.

Of the stay at an abandoned house, due to failure to reach their hoped-for destination the first night, Miss Reetz says: "There, in the middle of the floor was a sewing machine of popular make, and every home in Colombia seemed to boast of one. We found in the abandoned house a table, larger than a pool table, with top of clay and stones. In the center of this a fire was built as is the custom, we having to gather wood from the mountain-side. From the center of the thatched-roof was suspended a hook on which the kettle was hung for cooking. After the fire commenced to blaze we all sat about it on the table, trying to get warm. Our meal consisted of roast ham and roast chicken, panla, oranges and coffee. Preparing to retire for the night, we placed raincoats on the floor, then rolled up in our blankets. We had no pillows. As the night wore on, it became so cold, it was unbearable, the elevation being 10,000 feet. Another search for wood ended in the building of a fire, but the night seemed cold and endless. When morning came, we found the mules had left, and not knowing whether they had gone up or down the mountain, the only thing to do was to wait for their return. Finally they returned, and we packed and were off. The guides, bare-foot, would run alongside the mules. When snow was reached the guides would put grass sandals on their feet, but even then one would wonder at how they stood the cold."

The expected half-way house was not reached until the middle of the day, and there they were bid welcome at 14,000 feet elevation by a native woman, who spoke Spanish, and her two boys. A wild duck had been shot by one of the party before arrival at the home, and this was barbecued. Men of the party were soon off for more ducks, at a lake two miles distant. It was there that a gunning accident made return to the city imperative, for when Mr. Robinson aimed at some game, one of the young boys from the hostess' home, shot at the same instant, two shots passing through Robinson's hand. Forced to walk two miles to the house, he was given first aid. It was then five p. m., and too late for the down-ward trek to begin. The ten were made as comfortable as possible for the night in the one room, and a portion of the group started down with the injured man at eight a. m., while some continued the long-anticipated climb to the snow-capped peak. The descent was made in one day, and the party was met 20 miles out of the city by a man with a car. It was nine that night before the physician arrived from his ranch in the country, and after treatment, X-rays were taken the following day, when it was learned that no bones had been broken, and no bullets lodged in the flesh.

Other trips enjoyed were down the La Virginia Valley where coffee was being sorted and bagged, the native women smoking cigars all the while. Along the banks of many of the streams women could be seen washing clothes, beating the pieces against the rocks. The traffic regulations of the city of Paredo proved unusual. It is necessary to sound the horn of an automobile at each street intersection if the driver is proceeding straight ahead; two "honks" if he plans to turn to the right, and three if he is going left. For mountain travel the law requires that the horn be sounded at every curve; while the car proceeding in the direction of the capital city always has the right of way.

"The young man in that country woos his lady love from beneath her balcony," continued the one who so enjoyed the journey. "If he wishes to take the young woman on an outing, he must take the entire family. And when he asks for her hand in marriage, he must sign an agreement to marry."

A stop in Cartagena, a very old city, heavily fortified, and located along the coast, gave opportunity to visit the port which pirates once used as a stronghold. Tunnels run under the city to the fort, and one tunnel connects the fort and a church, the soldiers not having to enter the city to attend worship. In passing through these tunnels the visitors found it necessary to stoop very low, in order to negotiate the low ceilings. The walls of the forts are said to be 40 feet in thickness, and on top of these they had the pleasure of riding in an automobile. Monasteries and churches abound in this 400-year-old city. Through the streets of the town the women could be seen passing with goods piled high on their heads. The hotel laundress would have spread out nearly folded linens, and these piled high on her head as she made her way to her place of work. Native men could be seen with their curved knives, or machetes, which they use for all purposes—cutting through the jungle, carving meat, etc.

After boarding the S. S. "Talamanca" the two found their next stop was the Canal Zone. A ride to Gatun locks gave opportunity to watch the boats enter Gatun lake. Boarding a train they rode along the canal, across the isthmus to the Pacific side. "The parlor car interior was of mahogany, and oil lamps were used for lighting," said Miss Reetz. "From the train we could see the three locks. A tour of Panama City, with the ruins of the old section being visited, also provided time to see the golden altar located in one of the churches. This 50-foot altar of gold had been buried when Henry Morgan made his fruitless attempt to secure it. The narrow streets and many pieces of statuary in the parks and thoroughfares afforded much of interest, with the return from Panama to New York providing a second visit to the island of Jamaica."

Dancing and refreshments were enjoyed.
